Your Website Is Sending Customers to Your Competitors

Not getting as many clients as you want? The 5-Second Homepage Test shows you exactly why.

Just your phone

START HERE

Your next client gives you about 5 seconds.

Picture this. Someone needs exactly what you do. They search on their phone, tap three businesses, and open each site.

They don't read. They scan. In a few seconds they decide: is this the right place, can I reach them easily, and can I trust them?

The business that answers those three questions fastest gets the call. Not always the best business. The clearest one.

of people now always read reviews when looking for a local business, up from 29% a year ago.

31%

will only use a business rated 4.5 stars or higher, up from 17%.

21%

of people who can't reach a business by phone immediately call another one.

The hard part is that you never see it happen.

There's no message saying "I almost called you." They just leave. This test shows you where they're leaving, so you can stop it.

THE TEST

Grab your phone. Open your website. Don't scroll yet.

Look at your homepage the way a stranger would. Tick Yes only if it's clearly true. "Kind of" counts as No. Details for each check are on the next pages.

Your score / 10

1 point for every Yes. Your score means something. See page 07.

GROUP 1 OF 3

Do they get it?

Does your headline say what you do?

TRY THIS	Read only your headline. Could a stranger guess your business?
WHY IT HURTS	If they can't tell in 5 seconds, they go back and pick the next result.
GOOD LOOKS LIKE	It answers "what do you do, and for who?" Most sites miss this in small ways.

Can people tell you're local?

TRY THIS	Look for your city without scrolling.
WHY IT HURTS	People want someone nearby. If they don't see their area, they assume you don't serve it.
GOOD LOOKS LIKE	Your area is right at the top. How you say it matters for Google too.

Are your services clear?

TRY THIS	Can a customer find the exact thing they need in 10 seconds?
WHY IT HURTS	"Comprehensive solutions" means nothing to them. Confused people don't call.
GOOD LOOKS LIKE	Services named the way customers search for them, not the way your industry talks.

Is your homepage about you or about them?

TRY THIS	Count the sentences that start with "we" or "our."
WHY IT HURTS	Customers care about their problem first, your story second.
GOOD LOOKS LIKE	Their problem first, then why you're the one to fix it. The order changes everything.

GROUP 2 OF 3

Can they reach you?

Is your phone number hiding?

TRY THIS On your phone, can you call with one tap without scrolling?

WHY IT HURTS Nobody hunts for a number. They call the next business.

GOOD LOOKS LIKE One tap, top of the page, every page.

Is your main button hidden, or fighting other buttons?

TRY THIS Without scrolling, which button stands out most? Is it the one you want pressed?

WHY IT HURTS When every button looks the same, people press none.

GOOD LOOKS LIKE One button that clearly wins. The words on it matter more than you think.

Is contacting you a chore?

TRY THIS Count the taps and form boxes until you've reached out.

WHY IT HURTS Every extra step loses people, especially on a phone.

GOOD LOOKS LIKE Short, fast, obvious. What you ask for, and what you leave out, makes the difference.

Quick reality check

This group is where most "my website isn't working" problems hide. People were interested. They just couldn't reach you fast enough.

GROUP 3 OF 3

Do they trust you?

8

Can they see proof before scrolling?

TRY THIS Are reviews or stars visible at the top?

WHY IT HURTS 41% of people now always read reviews before picking a local business. If yours are buried, they'll go read your competitor's.

GOOD LOOKS LIKE Fresh, real reviews right where they decide. Which ones you show matters.

Is there a real person on your site?

TRY THIS Is there a photo of you or your team, with names?

WHY IT HURTS Stock photos make a real business look fake.

GOOD LOOKS LIKE A real face, early on. People call people.

10

Does your site load fast?

TRY THIS Search "PageSpeed Insights," paste your website link, and check the mobile score.

WHY IT HURTS Slow pages lose people before they see anything.

GOOD LOOKS LIKE It loads in a couple of seconds on a phone. The fix is often simpler than people think.

YOUR RESULTS

What your score means

0-4	Your site is turning people away. Visitors are leaving before they understand what you do. Start with checks 1 and 5. They usually make the biggest difference.
5-7	Good base, but it's leaking clients. People get what you do, but something stops them from reaching out. Look at whatever you missed in groups 2 and 3.
8-10	Your site isn't the main problem. Nice work. If the phone is still quiet, the issue is usually who's being sent to your site, and how many. That's a different fix.

BONUS CHECK

Call your own business at 7pm.

What happens? Voicemail? Nothing? Only 42% of callers leave a voicemail. The rest move on, and 21% call another business right away. Your website can do everything right and still lose the client here.

REAL EXAMPLE

A therapist in REDACTED was running ads that went nowhere.

Before

30 years of experience and a new coaching service to launch. Her Google Ads were set up by Google's free support team: broad targeting, keywords nobody searched, no tracking.

She thought her website was the problem. It wasn't. The wrong people were being sent to it.

What I did

- Checked what people were actually searching for before spending a dollar.
- Rebuilt her ads around one service with real demand.
- Built a page in her voice, then watched how real visitors used it and kept improving it.

After

new clients in 2 months, tracked through a dedicated form, separate from her referrals.

40% to 60-70%

full, based on her own capacity estimate. Inquiries went from about 2 to about 3.5 a month.

What happened next

She hired me again for a full website rewrite and SEO, and referred a friend.

This started as a free project while I was building my portfolio.

YOUR NEXT STEP

You found the leaks. Now let me show you the fixes.

This test showed you what's wrong. The harder part is knowing exactly what to change for your business, your customers, and your city. That's what I do.

1. Email me your website link and your score.
2. I'll run the full test on your site myself and send you your top 3 fixes, written for your business. Free.
3. If you want help making them, we hop on a 15-minute call. If not, you keep the fixes. No pitch, no follow-up spam.
